Consul-General Bruwaert Voices the Sentiments of His Fellow Countrymen-The Courier's Comments!

(Copyright, 1897, by W. R. Hearst.) Paris, Feb. 24. The Journal's interview with the President of France on arbitration as a substitute for war has created a profound sensation in Paris, and all the great newspapers pay high compliments to the Journal for its splendld feat

President Faure's utterance seems to have awakened the French mind to the far-reaching consequences of the decision of the American Senate on the pending arbitration treaty. Whatever the Senate (TRANSLATION.) may do finally will be a signal to Europe that may make or mar forever the whole beneficent principal of international law suggested by an Anglo-American compact. It is not to be wondered at that the President of France should honor journalam in this way, for in this country the journalist stands at the head of all profes-

The reception of the Journal's special commissioner, Mr. James Creelman, in the Elysee palace, by the head of the French nation, is the logical outcome of French love of sunlight in public affairs, Figaro, Ganlois, Libre Parole, Eclair, Evenment and La Paix publish the interview in full as cabled from the Journal.

FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES. The French population of New York will learn with satisfaction that President Faure has seized the opportunity which was of-fered him by our conferer, the Journal of New York, to express in generous words the traditional sympathies of France for the United States. The representative of the Journal asked Mr. Faure what he thought of the treaty of arbitration proposed between the Government of Washington and that of Great Britain. The President showed that he was thoroughly imbued with the importance of the treaty, which France would have voluntarily signed on her side, and he took advantage of the occasion to talk of the sentimental union which existed between the United States and France, by virtue of which all that interests Americans from an international point of view also interests the Franch.

French.

Upon the international importance of orbitration as an actual fact of civilization he said there could not be two opinions; War, the recourse to cannous, ought to be left to the barbaric people of Asia and Africa.

of 125 men on fiery black horses, following close on his heels.

The first event on the programme was a sabre drill, by the first two platons of Troop C, under command of Lieutenants Smith and Heltrick.

The next event was hardly less thrilling that the first. It was a general troop drill, under command of Captain Clayton. The horses had plenty of opportunity during the drill to show jast how thoroughly at home they were in the difficult kinds of movements and the verdict seemed to be that in this one event, at any rate, they carried off the Hon's share of the honors. Next came the saddlery race, which was hotly contested throughout. It was finally won by the members of the First Division. Bareback riding and jumpling over the "sticks" followed. Lieutenant Kettrick won the nurdle race. The sport wound up with a general music ride, in which the entire troop participated.

Among the weil-known society people ovescut were: Mr. and Mrs. Calvin E. Hell, Mr. and Mrs. H. Pattison, Colone and Mrs. J. N. Dykman, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Litchfield, Mr. and Mrs. Burton-Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. Charies A. Morrie, Mr. and Mrs. Watkins and the Misses Marie and Ethel Zimmerman.

"I do not know," he said. "I know that with only one exception all those engaged in its manufacture are members of the Onondaga Course Salt Association, and sell through that organization."

In Syracuse it has been stated that the New York Central owns a considerable portion of the best of the land and needs more of it to make a freight depot on the point now occupied by a few of the sait wells. It is claimed that the New York Central has openly acquired some of this, and that some of it is held by people for the Central until such a time as it is needed. It is not always certain that the person who acquires the land through the land department is the one for whom it is intended, as it frequently changes hands a few days later.
